

What power can save SUV's and family size vans?

A genie in a bottle riding real flying carpets?

Drinking some magic elixir of witches?

Magic beans and canned magic?

Wind Power of the gods?

Wizard of Oz?

The experts are gathered in back rooms => no voters allowed.
When they exit that room your world changes as they eliminate all SUV's.
It matters not how you voted because they will out-vote you "my friend".
You are in serious need of a couple aces up your sleeve.

See any laying around?

I gave it to you on July 12 2003.

It's right there, above, line number 5.

Card players have hid it from you for 5+ years.

Why? Well I guess because you're a nothing I suppose.

Yur a nothing so your wife & children must be little nothings too.

Energy confusion is what you eat for breakfast while laughing at MSNBC.

But the answer has always been in the Bible, where it says God's ruah, spirit, wind traveled to & fro across the waters. The answer was|still is God's Wind. Why do you think so many people and great thinkers alike are all so wrapped around Wind Power for? Wind is not magic. Neither are the wet noodle hybrid "air powered cars" now being built and sold in France, India and Australia.

Flowing breezes of air we call wind but bottle it under pressure then inject one exploding drop into 4 VW engine cylinders. Previously filled with steam makes a semi-vacuum in the cylinder so that not only does the "Wind" expand, it explodes with an exponential force on the order of aviation jet fuel. A jet takes off from an airport runway spewing the pollution equivalent of 500 Chicago City buses but exploding wind at piston heads does no such thing.

Since 2003 you have had many aces up your sleeve: the genie in the bottle, the flying carpet engines and yeah, the Wizard of Oz, except this Oz called it one of "God's Engines" that uses Physics Fuel not liquid woodstove fuels. Back room boys have kept you ignorant, knowing the real value of the cards I brought to the table so they do not dare mention my engines in the hope the quietness will drown the circularly-replenishing Wind Power Creation Engine. You should see its younger brother the double waterwheel uses metal balls in place of water molecules to generate electricity on the Moon and Mars.

They were right. Quietude silenced the real engines.

Don't mistake the spirit of understanding gifted me a witch's brew.

Mom might have also called me a november surprise.

Surprise: enjoy the artificial timeline.