

Superman ~played by actor Christopher Reeve~ tosses a polished green crystal. It sails through cold Arctic air for a long ways, then lands like Abraham's seed. It is a very special crystal that is or contains a sort of "growth matrix" that is perhaps activated by the strength of the one who throws it, upon landing building into a great house. I do not know of anyone who did not revel at the success of that movie hero's fictitious act.

We have seen it in real life, even politicians: John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Robert F. Kennedy his brother. Many individuals throughout history have been "crystal throwers" but the crystals they threw were ideas they hoped would grow into "great houses" all the same. Also a long list of religious people => Gandhi, Mohammed, John Calvin, Martin Luther King Jr., Jesus of Nazareth, as well others of various Negro & Oriental Races & times.

We look for these "living crystals". Their ideas ~like many palm branches~ give us cooling shade to escape a blazing desert sun. Jesus went a step further when he charged his followers they had to "spread the word". There was no compromising on that point. He preached so they had to also. If they stopped they would "lose their crown" as one of his followers would write later. (So much for once saved, always saved.)

I was blessed with a few good ideas since 1989 and began writing them, but the world's people had grown so harried and calloused by then to doc's new inventions. Although it is my belief a number of influential people became aware of them and began keeping tabs. If I didn't know better I might would think they were afraid of me & afraid of others too.

They were in control and wanted things to stay that way.

Today we know where that has gotten us: swimming in money; the ocean is too polluted. But who are "they"? Does it matter? The economic structure they have established is such that it has reached a sort of sentience of its own, having almost a living continuity. It is a devilish creation that some might be tempted to call a money-loving Great Satan. I prefer the Biblical Satan the Devil but the result is still => non-approved crystal throwers be damned. No matter which or both it is a powerful opponent. Better lock your doors.

Do you lock your doors at night? Why?

Whatever would happen if you did not lock them?

Thieves would steal your tax refund, harm your family?

So what would happen if you filled the airwaves bragging how all your doors are left unlocked all night? Would your home be filled with strangers by dawn? Sometimes it's wise to close doors... and use several locks. Locking doors is good wholesome protectionism,

a nighttime-healthy isolationism.

and another piece of flying crystal just landed.

Immigrants are fine, but the Devil needs to go.

Which Devil? Follow the money.

You'll find him.

look to see who wants your house?
