

Mumbai Tragedy 2008: Prelude to next World War 2014?

Riley 12/02/2008

Mumbai India readers have visited my website post-tragedy the Thanksgiving Days massacre of innocent unarmed civilians. I assume someone there wants me to comment on this awesome loss of life because they know my slant will differ from other's. My slant is that the white knuckle ride is just pulling away from the starting gate headed for possible World War by 2014. What about the terrorist's claim of being honored with 70 virgins in heaven?

Before I get into all that I would like to make an observation or two first. We live in a physical world and universe that was brought into existence on purpose not some toss of sticks landing on the ground and somebody called it a planet, or solar system. You take a can of house paint, a beautiful light blue color, admire its aqua hue, and you know immediately somebody wrote an equation that resulted in that color coming out just so.

Everything we see taste or feel is the result of a grand equation. Wood has a wood equation, soft carpet a carpet equation and all the evidence we could ever need proving the existence of God. And that is just the inanimate. Life is a level of holy that is worlds above wood and carpet fibers. If there was only one of us left standing on the planet, the planet is filled with our human holiness.

The tragedy of Mumbai is not 196 dead; it's that one died repeated 196 times. Each person who died filled a place no other person on earth can replace. The Bible speaks of people in the past being resurrected and points to a time in the near future when all the dead will be raised from their grave to life again in a vastly improved world under a heaven-based government that will restore the pure equation of Genesis Paradise on Earth, a system restart.

But you know, resurrection is just another word in the dictionary when loved one's blood is shed and they are gone. A cold lifeless word. I would like to take this opportunity to make that word a bit more than that for you. Life is the result of a "life equation" that had to first be written. In our experience of life we see that people come of age to where they can parent children, so we think of life as something that always goes forward.

Life and Time both, both always going forward parallel together so we think in terms familiar to us => when someone dies we tend to feel Time pulling away from our dead and leaving them farther & farther behind. However, anyone who understands equations knows if they can be written in one direction they can be turned around backwards and still work. uh-huh.

One of the very first things I wanted to find out when I began studying the Bible with Jehovah's Witnesses in 1969 concerned my Dad who had just passed away. They explained how the Resurrection would begin with the most recently deceased and proceed backwards to their parents, then their parents and so on, an orderly procession til all who had died would live again in "God's New World". See Acts 24:15 and 2 Peter 3:13 "where righteousness will dwell".

Death is the penalty we inherit from original sin. Those who die have therefore paid that price in full, so anyone resurrected starts life with a clean slate. Does that include murderers on a jihad attacking people having nothing to do with them? Not according to moral and religious laws (4th paragraph down).

Last year 2007 it occurred to me just what "resurrection" means in real terms so let's put some perspective on it. At conception a child's genes contains information that "makes them tick" but it also contains a road map back telling what also made their parents tick, a trail telling their exact makeup; ever hear of "reverse engineering"?

When it comes time for that future resurrection to start (after Armageddon) the son of God will give the word and human life will reverse backwards yet Time still going forward as normal, the genes of those living calling out to the dead the exact makeup DNA reconstruction instructions to see them brought back to life in the newly-restored paradise... generation by generation coming to life rippling back through Time til all are living again, which by the way is not really that many people, most having died in the 20th century and well within the capabilities of a healthy planet to sustain.

"Resurrection" then is much more than just some cold dictionary word. At the same time remember that my understanding being true or partly true remains to be seen. It is to me very encouraging to know more than just the word, to realize that Jehovah can pull the reverse engineering feat of all time ~ when it comes time for it. Is that time near at hand? I can answer yes to that for many reasons but let's go back to the subject:

Even though the dead terrorists committed terrible acts in this world should they expect to be worthy of such a miracle and be resurrected? Given God's Mercy and knowledge of individuals i.e. what caused them to do such things, might could slide them through to be resurrected? At the same time, that hope hangs by a very thin thread because in order to be resurrected God would have to remember their personality => a personality He hates (Psalms 34:16) "The face of the LORD is against them that do evil, to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth" and Proverbs 10:7 => "The memory of the just is blessed but the very name of the wicked shall perish forever". So terrorists or Adolph Hitlers of th past getting resurrected into a harem is very questionable.

I performed an act of terrorism in school.

My childhood was speckled with suicides of close family males and Dad. I recall going to funerals when I was 3 and 4 years old, too young to know what it meant like an Iraqi child orphaned today. We did not have a lot so as I grew older I began noticing other children went on something called a "vacation". I had never heard the word before. Dad had serious injuries from falling through collapsed ice in the Aleutian Islands in WW II. His legs were busted up and frozen, thawed out later in a crispy hot whirlpool. He was unable to "amount to much" so we got by. I still had a better life than many but at the time living it... so one day entering 7th Grade English class I was suddenly overwhelmed, got upset over my life I guess and knocked a boy in the back, a cowardly act, totally unplanned the teacher sitting watching the whole violent act.

So when I see terrorists opening fire on unarmed civilians I have to wonder just how bad their lives must have been also, not because I am some "bleeding heart liberal" but because one time I also struck out in rage at a person who was not responsible for my problems. Instead of using a gun I used my bare hands & strength to knock a happy unsuspecting boy down from behind.

His name? Clifton Gaddy. Teacher's name? Miss Clingenpeel. School? Breckinridge Junior High, Williamson Road Roanoke. And my shame marked and seared forever into memory always recalling. Even after a full life of illness and head traumas I was for that moment a vicious terrorist.

Now for some Psychology 101 about pressure pushing the next World War (by 2014?).

I have been the recipient of many pressures such as the fly from the car when very young, my head crushing into the ground as the car I was riding in turned a curve. I had occasion to be struck in my 9YO forehead with boards twice and tripped into the ground smashing the right side of my head in 8th Grade, as well some other great incidents like being cold-cocked in the back of my head by accident with a large rock. Many times I returned home with blood down my shirt sometimes blinded by it in my eyes having to be led home. hehehehe

When I was given a prescription drug in 1986 and the pharmacist left off all the warning labels that made me high as a kite the next day, so that feeling invincible I stepped off the edge of the high truck bed... or the 1,000 pound bale glancing my shoulder propelled me at the speed of a rocket sled forward then hit behind my knees, bringing my chest slamming into the asphalt well, I know a lot about physical and mental pressure.

On the other hand, in 2006 a sudden cancer struck the entire right side of my chest while I stood in the kitchen, all the cells beginning to collapse as if they were suddenly turning into cadaver fodder. After 4 weeks struggle with death itself a kind of healing pressure like I had never felt before entered into me, a Life Pressure that stopped death, and I knew right then I was a healed man... because I'd experienced a resurrection, I believe by Divine Will to help others.

The terrorists in this world are suffering from pressure too, unless we buy into this story they just suddenly swallowed bottles of evil pills. Possible perhaps but just plain not bloody likely that they are true pathological killers from some deep mental illness. More likely they are striking out as a last resort to recover their lives in some way. What pressure is at work? What pressure would drive a person to do such heinous acts and thereby lose out on a resurrection to be with their family once again?!

I could speculate many such things but really, I think they already know and so does everybody else. Homes blown up, country invaded and overrun with people of another Race they likely cannot stand the smell of. Saw their family killed by smart bombs. I doubt I have begun to touch the reasons but how many Americans could do any different than them til they began striking out? Older cultures don't appreciate the new dough boys on the block telling them how to live. People should have their own land just like us.

The Pressure Cooker about to Blow

2014 is the anniversary of World War I. Between now & then I fully expect the heavenly kingdom to take action towards clearing this planet of all people who do not avail themselves of its blessings bringing Peace to the World. But, not everyone shares my Bible-based belief since they have not studied the subject as we have. Many also have never heard about all the other many prophecies outside the Bible all of which appear to be agreeing to this being that time.

Such as the Mayan calendar. Such as the Native American Indian belief in a "white buffalo" who is to help many return to the "God-Creator". Add in the recently discovered lost manuscript of Nostradamus pointing toward "one male" whose appearance heralds either that great age or an end of all things. The air is fast filling with a level of extreme tension making everybody edgy.

Let's imagine all prophecies are wrong & nothing happens. Well, if the advent of a new Great Age of Mankind fails to happen then plenty of other things are. Nostalgia is a powerful force. People pressed against the wall by circumstances they cannot change might decide to try and bring the house down on their own attempting to return the planet to a former time (1914) when the Earth's population was mostly agrarian societies (farmers). Other forces are also increasing this nostalgia pressure. Just think about all the many promises made 50 years ago such as how we would all have flying cars? What happened to them? If you think people get upset over losing their cufflinks you haven't seen anything. The stew has been sitting in that pot so long people are getting really perturbed.

Friends, this planet is set to explode from all these forces. However, this has not surprised me; in fact, I have been expecting it. You see, people are reflecting the planetary violence going on around them. The tectonic motion hitting Reno Nevada, tsunamis hitting India, dry slides pouring down the sides of sinkholes, quakes in places that never have them, the Yellowstone caldera close to blowing out. Meteors raining down from the sky @300 degrees below freezing in their center being intensely heated and melted from earth's atmosphere into a frozen-turkey-in-grease (Canadian geese) explosion before ever hitting Earth's surface spraying us with a shotgun blast of 33,000 mph rock pieces? Fires in California and Australia spewing soot and ash into the upper clouds increasing global dimming => shadow cooling. Even the world's scientists are torn between global warming and global cooling when they are both right => Earth is a climate pendulum.

Fighting with each other does not solve all that. On the other hand, those who decide to recognize their spiritual need and start knocking on Christ's door -fully expecting even demanding it to open by his own promise to open it to the deserving Isaiah 2:2- will be allowed to enter and in a short time afterward be reunited with their resurrected loved ones in a Paradise better than 1914.

God's promise to the first man and woman have never been rescinded.
