

The Trinity Teaching: Trick by Bible Scripture? |techniques employed by clergy and self-hynosis|

Growing children learn by watching adults. It does not take them long to understand the rules of their house (and rules of the game of Life either). Having been just recently born, the young child's mind is sharp as a strap. They pick out the Winners, they pick out the Losers, and they quickly decide they want to be a Winner also.

But they also suffer a high degree of gullible and also quickly come to understand how small they are and how big everybody else is, meaning they learn not to try to steal the ship. Some try anyway due to being hard headed so they quickly get culled out over into the Losers column anyway so forget them. All who want to survive learn to imitate Winners. Those who simply must do things their way suffer the fate... except a rare few exceptions.

When children are born into a religious home they have some additional issues to agree with whether they understand why or not. Aren't we all. When I was young I was told yes, lightning has much electricity but no, you can't have it because no one has it, never has and never will. That grated on me bad because if no one could use it then that means it's useless, and I was not able to accept that all that power in the summer air and night sky was useless.

So I tucked my disbelief into a special place to be remembered and come back for later which I have in fact since done in 1989. But when it comes to religion, a third party named GOD is brought into the picture. Disagreeing with what adults tell a child is one thing but to flaunt this God person is a different ballgame. So what happens is whole generations of humans who do not understand the Trinity accept it anyway because they don't want to be losers, which is what usually happens when we buck the system we are born into. The answer of course is to find a New System Jesus approves of where people follow his admonition to store their treasures in heaven not by refusing to pay lawful taxes on church property.

There are many arguments in favor of concluding that God and Jesus could be the same person just in different forms at different times for different reasons. In fact though all a person needs to do is pick up any Bible and read the New Testament; soon they will come across both words in the same sentence and even calls GOD the Saviour! However, bear in mind that 1+1 does not yet equal a triune Trinity "Godhead" that claims all are equal when one of them repeatedly disagreed while on earth claiming not to be equal to his Father, who was later called by Paul to the Colossians the "firstborn of Creation", not GOD.

In the Bible, the word "spirit" is used to mean a person or an animal's life force, not a separate person or entity or soul. When Adam was created the Bible says Adam "became a living soul". Check it for yourself Genesis 2 vs 7. And he only became a living soul AFTER he started breathing. However, in order to finish constructing a Trinity teaching the early church had to tell their parishioners that God's spirit was not just a force but the third leg of the Trinity they wanted everybody to believe. Why? Part of it was to bring older believers online with newer believers to get everybody on the same page.

Much of the ancient world already had multiple collections of gods. Many were arranged in a triune structure. Triangles are in fact a very powerful shape. Use of a triangle then worked toward giving new believers what they already had in their former pre-Christian belief system, so making the leap from heathen to Christian became much less of an obstacle.

To flesh out the Trinity teaching then all they needed to do was start capitalizing spirit to Spirit, which of course at first probably looked like a harmless way to distinguish God's Great Spirit from man's punier spirit as well the spirit of animals, then somewhere along the way this got morphed into being "Holy Ghost". Jesus and his apostles had written of an apostasy that would come after they were gone. It certainly did. Satan had a lot of time.

Jesus said you could tell a tree by its fruit so what has been the fruitage from all this Trinity teaching down through the ages? Many have been persuaded to dabble in demonism and ouija boards out of curiosity wanting to experience something greater than what we have now. After all, they must reason, if there's one Ghost that implies there must be other ghosts eh? So the Halloween "fruitage" has actually come out of the loins of Catholic hierarchy over the ages even to be spreading also into Protestant religious belief. This is the very kind of spreading corruption Jesus and his apostles told had to come.

Obviously by now you realize this is not a strict analysis of the Trinity teaching; it never was intended to be. I simply want to make a few points and raise some questions as to whether Jesus Christ and his apostles who later wrote the NT books taught it or it filtered in when the clergy got to wanting more people dropping their money in the Sunday collection plates... as somewhere along the way their desperateness to "grow the Church" became synonymous with grow the Church's bank account. So they started a snowball that grew into a World Church that owned much land and also now possesses enough Gold to cure the current world recession.

There is a mounting movement of people wanting the churches to more fully share the economic load of this world but that is very difficult to do when so many people are in both worlds => the religious & economic. However, if it came to light that the wealth of today's churches was obtained through subterfuge over many generations of humans and their families by a deliberate misreading of the Holy Bible... then taking "their money" or "their land" or otherwise equalizing the churches' wealth becomes completely lawful to do.

Not only would it be the legal thing to do it would in fact be righteous and lawful to recover monies that was tricked off people's plates and paychecks over thousands of years which would not represent the taking of their money but the recovery of stolen monies obtained through a hierarchical scam while taking advantage of less-educated rather purposely-hypnotized believers.

Is money taken from parishioners by false application of corrupted Bible teachings a punishable crime? Most of the clergy who put the crime to work are dead and gone so they have already paid the price for the original trickery. How about church officials now doing it? No sense building more prisons, but a legal correction and course change would be called for to satisfy law.

We all inherit many ways of doing things from people who died long ago... who made their decisions based on Then not Now. In my opinion the entire issue needs a good hashing out. If the Catholic Church and other "sub-churches" (you might call the Protestants) are found to be conducting a false teaching not supported in the Bible for the purpose of keeping multitudes in awe of "Church authority", that's coercion and extortion under false pretenses. In other words, the Trinity Teaching if shown False is an inflating & expanding of God.

Little more than a bullying tactic. Subsequently, monies paid to a church that has employed such tactic to subdue the peoples of the United States to keep forking them money should in fact be brought into a more harmonious arrangement of some kind or other. Threatening hellfire is also a similar bullying tactic that should violate Federal Law; because if they can bust up a cult like Waco then they can bust up any size religious group that fails to meet a reasonable religious qualification as being aligned with their Bible 100%.

If they fail to do that then they are not a Bible church at all; they are making their own rules. No matter how large a church they are, if they claim the Bible as their reason for being a church but the lawful authorities determine their belief(s) has(have) parted with clear Bible teaching then they lose their status and come under laws for businesses and corporations.

Using "GOD" as a cover for a scam doesn't cut it. They should be pulled onto the mat and made to prove what they are today not what they claim they started as 2,000 years ago because 2,000 years ago is over... and, in fact, many Bible writings have also been discovered such as the Dead Sea scrolls.

New evidence calls for a new examination and new decisions.

None of which am I the best qualified to do but which I feel very qualified to question just as I questioned lightning not being usable as a power source. I have shown lightning can be used to generate electrical power & I feel just as certain the Trinity Teaching is an ages-old ingrained trick played on the gullible for the purpose of keeping mankind enslaved to men who wear brightly colored gowns in Public and colorful hats. None of which impresses me.

So is the Trinity a true Bible teaching or not? Well, were capitals used for God's holy spirit in all cases of early manuscripts? No or Yes? Was the masculine form of the words used to denote a 3rd Person or was it just grammatical gender? And if pray tell God and Jesus are one and the same, after Jesus died and resurrected to life why did Bible writers from Paul to John continue writing as if they were still two separate beings/Beings?

Ultimately my belief is that the Church is floating down a river of money on a raft made of lies. A majority of their parishioners are unable to explain the Trinity teaching but talk themselves into believing it anyway, self-hypnotizing theirselves by using a Math trick called "substitution" they learned to use when very young children => that when they read the Bible and come across "God", they read "Trinity". When they come across the name "Jesus" they read it but their mind substitutes in the word "Trinity" again. This is widely recognized by psychologists as a cult programming tool to keep their members from leaving.

Separate the issues! Churches and Taxes are two different things.

When they come across the name "Jesus" they read it, but their mind substitutes in the word "Trinity" again. True Christians recognize this as a horrific violation of what John wrote us not to do: add anything to the Scriptures! The lawful United States Government is charged with the protecting of its citizens from cults that employ such mind control techniques.

So should the government shut down all churches and take over their bank accounts?? No, that would not be proper at all. Whew. However, churches should have to prove their beliefs to be actually sourced from the Book they use to call themselves a Church in the first place or lose the free tax hayride.

If they are unable to provide clear proof then they should be stripped of their Church designation IN REGARDS TO TAXATION but they can go on being a Church all they want because it is the will of the people even if they are brainwashed, even if they are tricked, even if they are being manipulated; it is their Right to choose to be brainwashed tricked and manipulated out of their time and money and devotion quota all day long if that is their wish, esp since it is making them happy and usually law-abiding in other areas.

Such churches would be lawfully taxed, that's all.
Seems pretty cut and dry here.
Prove it or lose it.

Then keep on having all the services ya want.

The government should do its job.
The government should do its job.
The government should do its job.
Or turn in its keys.

For those who are "sighing and groaning" over the religious conditions on Earth that has allowed and even fostered false teachings to creep into the congregations to pad their wallet for over 1700 years my suggestion is to make a decision. Do you want to know what the Bible teaches or do you want the approval of family members? Do you want to continue in life ignorant of the blessings in the Bible, the teaching of a paradise about to be restored? Those people who went to such great lengths to steer you clear of Jehovah's Witnesses... what made them do that? How about a conflict of interest, hmm?

There's one sure way to find out. Ask us. Not some disgruntled person who had bipolar problems now wanting to blame Witnesses for them either. Not some pretend Witness website launched out of hatred for their failure, which Jesus referred to as the "evil slave" and we recognize has now grown into a group. The only way to know what goes on inside the four walls of a Kingdom Hall is to come sit and observe, to know our Bible-based beliefs to ask for a home Bible study or read some literature. Otherwise you are just being tricked by yet another impostor. Make people prove who they are!
